I'm really not very good. I always seem to catch a fish or two. I really do understand basic entomology as I teach an aquatics section of high school environmental science, but still don't know all the subtle names of mayflies yet. Mostly I struggle with dead drifting without drag, mending, and my leader arrangement. What I have found...I catch just enough to know that I'm getting better and just enough to keep me wanting more. What else is there to do until archery season?
