Calm down Andy,

There is always a small sz. 16 quill gordon that hatches on warmer days in late winter early spring. It is not the big one..b.w.o.'s were showing as well. i will start reporting on my site whats going on up here beginning of march...

Bob,

I fished the delayed harvest on the Pine at Slate Run today, and saw 2 mayflies. One was small maybe a size 18 or 20, which I assumed was an olive. The other one I would estimate to be a size 12 or 14, coloration from 10 ft or so away to be a Quill Gordon. Maybe a little smaller, wish I could have caught it to verify.
