

Subject: : Stream Reports

Topic: : Lake Marburg, York County, 2/13/2013

Re: Lake Marburg, York County, 2/13/2013

Author: : Fishidiot

Date: : 2013/2/16 8:17:12

URL:

Quote:

JakesLeakyWaders wrote:

Mike,

I mean I find it kind of funny how they tossed a bunch in Pinchot years back, Pinchot is mostly less than 10-15 feet deep throughout the lake.

Don't know if you remember, back in the 90's they dumped like 17'000 or so coho salmon in Marburg and they were in there for years.

Jake

Jake,

Yeah, I remember the cohos. Boy, talk about a story that got a heckuva lot more press than it deserved. 😊

Regarding Pinchot - the fish stocked there were (are) hybrid stripers and I think they dropped it from the muskie list (although I'd have to check - may be wrong)

Mike,

I've long wanted to see stripers in Marburg since well before the WP invasion. Maybe poach some fingerling from the Susky or lake Redman/Williams allotment and try 'em in Marburg on a short term basis. The lake has many similar characteristics to Raystown and I think the local angling community would welcome the experiment.