

---

Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing

Topic: : SURF WORTHY ROD ?

Re: SURF WORTHY ROD ?

Author: : marcq

Date: : 2013/2/18 14:42:54

URL:

A guide in Jersey told me once if i go out with him i will have to make case around 50 feet at the minimal. we were also using a boat and in the bay. it wasn't hard but you need to know how to double haul. A stiffer rod with a little more back bone helps a lot.

those opportunities where bait is at your feet are rare. that's one reason why most spin fisherman out fish the fly guys. they can cast beyond that first bar. there will defiantly going to be fish in the wash but not as many as out further.

what fish are you targeting? Where do you plan on fishing?

no need to get expensive gear for the salt unless your planning on fishing for ablies which a reel if the most important thing you need. id say get a rod in the 150 to 200 dollar range. i was thinking about buying an echo ion or edge a while back they look solid and have a life time warranty. from my experiences if you buy a rod above 200 and it breaks the company are good about replacing it.