One thing I always did with my comparaduns is put at least one thin wrap of dubbing (sometimes two) in front of the wing to prop up that deer hair wing. I always thought that was a bit more effective than just a thread dam. Don't know whether that is right or wrong. Something to consider. Keep up the good work!

I think H-A will back me up here, I tie a pretty fair CD. I agree with H-A about where the wing should be and I also agree with DC about dubbing in front of the wing but where he says take one wrap, I say more. I use as much dubbing in front of the wing as I do on the entire abdomen. My technique is to dub very tightly in front of the wing. My wing almost never comes back forward and they float very well. That said Dave, you are coming along very well.
