So whenever I talk to someone else about fly tying, they always have a preference in tying thread. The most popular brands seem to be UNI and UTC but that's just how I see it. Just wondering what your preferences are. For me I think each thread lends its self to different situations. But I generally use UTC because it flatness well or 6/0 olive Danville. The Olive Danville just seems to go with anything. Matt Grobert showed me that.

P.S. - I don't know if someone else has already made a post about this, if they have just let me know. Thanks.

Here is a video different threads being tested.. This is a good channel and in my opinion, is under-subscribed so check their other videos out.
