I have a Canon PowerShot D10 (waterproof). It takes nice pics.

When I was shopping, my gripe with the Olympus's was slowness. Took too long to power up, focus, save a picture, etc. The Canon is lightning quick, I can power up, snap a pic, and power down in just seconds. They both take nice pictures.

That was quite a while ago now, though, and I'm sure things have changed. Canon has a new model. Nikon has joined the waterproof fray, and always put out a good product. Olympus I'm sure has new models. The GoPro's have become popular and look nice. I think even the cheaper brands have waterproof models, like Casio, Fuji, etc.
