Sandfly is, of course, right about the color. See here for an example: <http://www.troutnut.com/specimen/439>
The fact that the fly catches fish does not mean that it is a good match for the natural. I think that most of the flies we use when we think these nymphs are active, most of which are black, are really just reasonable attractor patterns. On the other hand, the posted pattern is a nice and simple one that looks like a fish catcher.
