Thanks to everyone for the great posts and tons of excellent information! I have been fishing SC for over 20 years, and this post has opened my eyes to some things I never thought of, or would have even began to think of. It's a great stream with both it's pros and cons. I have to agree MHanes though, BAD FISHING, Go to Tionesta! jk

The question I haven't seen addressed, (possibly because its a moot point), what about wildlife influence? In the past few years, I have noticed an increase in otter activity in the lower portions of Spring Creek(slides, scat, etc) Mostly from the Hill farm(FR130 bridge) to the confluence of the Clarion. I have also noticed more mink, blue heron, and eagles over the past few years. Is it possible that they could be putting a dent in the stocked and native populations?

As Bearfish posted earlier, I have also noticed a decline in the past few years. The only correlation I have seen, or could attribute it to is the increase in mining activity, not to point any fingers.
