

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Need some advice.

Re: Need some advice.

Author: : PennKev

Date: : 2013/2/25 1:10:32

URL:

If this is going to be a 4, 5, or 6wt rig, go cheaper on the reel and put the cash towards the rod. The Orvis clearwater Large Arbor for instance is a great reel for $80. I have a friend who uses one of the large models on his two-hamded rod for steelhead and it works very well.

Use the $60 or so you saved by getting the Clearwater over the Konic and put it towards a better rod. For instance the Orvis Cleawater rods which are right at $200

If you're locked into a budget I think this is the way to go. Your reel and rod do not need to be balanced in price, particularly for freshwater rigs. Also there is a bigger difference between a $100 rod and $200 than thee is between a $400 and $800 rod.

Again, if your budget is tight go for the better rod.

Kev