Had a hatch at Neshannock today of these, not big, but thanks to the info above from frequent tyer, I threw on a sulfur nymph, and proceeded to catch a handful including a nice sucker.

Those suckers can help fix a skunking, but sometimes when the fish are rising they are darn near impossible to keep off your flies in the right lies. Neshannock is just full of them.

Grannoms on the neshannock are just around the corner!

Great tie frequenttyer. What's the shell back made of?
