

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : Finally caught him

Re: Finally caught him

Author: : mike_richardson

Date: : 2013/2/25 12:42:42

URL:

Yes that is the possible, but the crazy thing is that our main hatchery has not seen browns in 5 years. We did have a holding pond where the trout get a little bigger, but no matter what (if this fish is a stocked fish [WHICH I AM 99 % SURE IT IS]) it is still 5 years old.

His picture is now gracing the walls of my office in an 8x10 oak frame. Hope to top this fish this year but i can say i set the bar high on my 2013 season. I can only imagine what he looked like in the fall after aseason of eating insects, baitfish, and god only knows what else, rats, small children that wandered to close.. LOL

I may try an evening shot at him in the spring with a mouse fly. Never caught a trout on one yet but think it would be neat.