

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : Nymphing

Re: Nymphing

Author: : PennKev

Date: : 2013/2/25 14:08:41

URL:

Quote:

mre3810 wrote:

I think I know what I'm doing, but always find myself watching other fisherman around me catch more fish than I do.

Pay closer attention to where they are fishing, or more precise where they are casting. A 50yd stretch of stream might have only 10yds of water that is likely to hold fish. (or none at all for that matter.)

Reading the water and focusing on only the most likely spots is key to catching fish IMO. Even the best streams have more crappy "dead" water than good fish holding areas. A trick is to think in three dimensions, a spot may look good but, for example, if it's only shin deep or has poor bottom structure it is probably not holding many fish.

Kev