

---

Subject: : Beginner Forum

Topic: : Buyers remorse

Re: Buyers remorse

Author: : marcq

Date: : 2013/2/25 14:33:48

URL:

pcray hit it on the head but I would add if you really want to go salt get a 10 or higher. im considering your are talking about surf fishing.

the other thing to add is salt is probably one of the more expensive sides of fly fishing because you need a floating line a int sinking line and a fast sinking that being said for one rod you will need around 150 dollars in line and that's on the cheap side. a reel cost around the same plus two extra spools so your looking around 600 bucks in one rod. that's for reasonable priced gear to.

besides that salt can be very humbling. its one of those thing where I think your best to go out with a guide who fly fishes once or twice before you make any moves in that salt direction. at least do the salt jam where you will be with people who know a good amount.

it is awesome when you catch any fish in the surf. trumps about any other fishing I've done in fresh water.