

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : Nymphing

Re: Nymphing

Author: : perrycountypappy

Date: : 2013/2/25 14:44:38

URL:

I'm with penn, pay attention to where those other guys are fishing. They are fishing in the areas they are for a reason. They have learned that those areas hold fish. Learning to read water and finding where the fish are holding takes time on the water, not reading about it, or even being told about where to fish but from being on the water flinging line and yes losing a few flies. Remember it is a process and it takes time to learn what will eventually become instinct. Strikes are often very light, any time that line quits moving at the same speed as the water that could be a take. And at the end of the day you may find a spot holding fish, use the correct fly, be drag free and still not catch anything. It sounds like you are on your way to learning just keep at it.