

Subject: : Fly Fishing Locations

Topic: : Safe Wading Levels

Re: Safe Wading Levels

Author: : PennKev

Date: : 2013/2/26 19:09:39

URL:

Check this link for flow/wading info in the LJR:

<http://www.littlejuniata.org/article.php?id=17>

As of this post, the flows are perfect at just over 200 cfs. Very nice for this time of year. It is often 300+ in the winter.

Not nearly as familiar with Penns, but it is tougher to wade overall IMO. I've fished it when it was 500+ and caught fish but I'm not sure I'd say it was fun. The 200-400cfs range is much better fishing. 20cfs can actually seem kinda low on Pnns.

A staff is prob a good idea for either although i've never used one onestream. Both streams may be a culture shock depending on what you are used to wading.

Kev