I plan on fishing up above where they stock. Our plan was to drive up to the gate I hear about and then hike up into where Baker, Shoemaker, Clenenden Branch, and Cold Fork come together. Then hike out to Eagleton Road and then catch a ride to my camp.

Have fun! Study your maps carefully and figure out where the trails and cabin drives and gas lines etc. are located. It's rugged country and not a good place to get lost. (I did one time!)

This is great advice, but I would also suggest you to keep a topo of the area with you while you fish (I keep them in a tube in my day pack). This will give you an idea of where you are on a given stream at a given time. That is a remote area (as you know) once you start getting back into those tribs, but if you don't stray too far from the stream you can't really get lost.
