Some of my best days were when I caught only a few fish. My opinion is that the quality of your outing isn't measured in numbers, but the fishing experience itself. I never really count, but I know that I am more likely to remember catching a big Delaware brown over a day where I slay trout the whole time I'm out.

agreed njk. i was just curious how many trout it takes to define slaying...etc, for the ff guys.

i never kept track of numbers before last year and didn't care about numbers.
