In my prime , and before the accident at work , that took my left leg off below the knee , I had a little ritual thing that I did which was to put a small pebble (we used to call them "lucky stones" as kids) into my pocket every time i caught and released a trout. At the end of the day , and this was an all day outing , dawn to dusk , I would count the pebbles and put them in a jar. On what I considered a "GOOD" day there would be around 20 pebbles in my pocket. Between 20 and 30 is what i would have considered , slaying them.
