The further south you go the better, March can be a cold month and if you get up into higher elevations you'll find that out real fast. You will need a National Forest tag to fish in any of the NP's or National Forests, and the regs vary as to limits and things like that. All the NF's have camping but it can be quite cold over night so you may not want to do that.

But the fishing in VA is sepcial if you're in the NP or NF, personally I like Shenanndoah NP and Mt. Rogers Nat. Rec Area. Both have great scenery and both have great fishing.
