I used to fish that area a lot in my early days of fly fishing, but it has been ten years or so since I have given that area a serious day of fishing. The vast majority of the fish in Spring Creek and Millstone creek are stockies.

There is a tributary (or at least used to be) to Spring Creek that held Brookies, but as far as the main stem goes it gets way too warm for resident trout. I have caught smallmouth out of the lower end before and took water temps in the high 70's.

There is always the rare catch of a wild brown in Spring or Millstone, but I would assume the fish are travelers, constantly changing location with the seasons.
