After the post made about how many fish people catch on average got me thinking.. I fish the LL and at least this time of year my days have gone from skunked to a max of six fish. I want to know if there is something I am doing wrong, or is this normal. I am absolutely devoted to straight line nymphing right now as this is the preferred method for competition which I am training for. Does anyone have any general advise or knowledge as to things I am might be doing wrong. I am just using an approximately 18" long piece of amnesia for a sighter and dropping about 5-8 feet below it my anchor fly, and then about 15" below that my dropper. I am only trying to get better so no advise is off limits as long as it is valid. Non location related advise is welcome also. Thanks.

P.S. - I usually fish for about 1 - 3 hours. I am fourteen so time on the water is limited..
