Thanks Guys.

Tim and Chaz,

I know nothing about photography (Dave Kile could probably answer your tech questions)..... however from an arts perspective one things I'd suggest if you're trying to photograph animals: Take the pic so that the final composition does not have the animal or fish in the center of the image (or crop the final image to this effect).

Good wildlife artists - do a search on artists like Robert Bateman, Mark Susinno, or Bob Kuhn - almost always have composition in the "rule of three" concept and the animal is just off center.

Looks much better.
