Our first stop on the tour, was the obligatory visit to blarney castle.

There is stream that flows on the property there that we had to cross over by foot. And I observed quite a few trout rising to caddis flies. Do you know what that stream is - and if it's open to the public?

Later on in the tour, we drove through connemara - and I saw some fish rising in the numerous lakes we passed there.

We also stopped at a place called kylemoor abbey, And there were some trout rising in the stream and lake that runs in front of it. Fishing was available there for 80 euro per day - plus the national license.
