A couple of things with shooting heads. I think most are around 30' in length. When casting you want the entire head out of the rod tip, plus some running line. The idea is to double haul to get your rod loaded deeply and then let 'er fly. Depending on the weight rod you are planning on putting this on 400gr may be a bit much for the rod to handle. If you're looking for a line that you can mend as well as cast, don't look at a shooting head system. The running lines are not designed to mend.
