I did pretty poorly overall. With the kiddo, my fishing time took such a huge nosedive. And most of my outings were re-aquainting myself with streams I know and like. Also, with so many people I like to fish with, and more than I intend to fish with going forward, most of the outings were of the social variety as much as anything. And it seems social outings are rarely about exploring new water.

It's unfortunate because exploring is a part of the game I love. It wasn't unexpected, though. And fatherhood is worth it.

From the fishing end, I do expect things to improve slightly this year, with a little more time than last year, but still not what I was accustomed to before.
