You're right, naming 1000 streams could be interpreted as outing them but the reality is it isn't singling out any one particular stream out as being better than the others. Therefore some streams, even though named on the list, never really go onto the radar screen simply because they haven't been separated from the others. Those that get their name tossed around the internet end up being separated.

The NFL, MLB, NBA, or NHL issues a listing of the projected top 100 draft picks in alphabetical order. Unless you really follow that sport and know what you are reading you have no idea who is the projected #1 pick and who is the projected #100 pick. Now if that list puts them in order 1-100 that does indeed separate #1 from #100.
