

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : How long will it take?

Re: How long will it take?

Author: : PennKev

Date: : 2013/3/7 5:45:32

URL:

Quote:

gmillen wrote:

Any info is apriciated i'm new to the art.

It's not art. It's fishing.

Don't get caught up in the romantic, mystical mumbo-jumbo. You'll start catching fish sooner if you take a pragmatic approach to the sport.

Also, I've mentioned numerous times on other threads that reading the water is the most important factor in success. The biggest difference between the guys catching fish and the guys who aren't is where they are fishing. One of the biggest mistakes i see guys doing is wasting a lot of time trying to cover wide, long, fairly shallow, featureless flats. Unless you see actively feeding fish there, this is not a recipe for success.

Depending on how much fishing experience you laready have, it could take a while, or you may pick it up very quickly. When I started I had several years of trout fishing experience and almost as much experience fishing for panfish with flies. It was an easy transition.

Kev