I was one of the "unlucky ones" that had never fished for trout with spinning equipment. I really had never fished moving water much before starting to fly fish. I had to learn the mechanics of fly fishing and trout theory simultaneously. Combine my inexperience with the fact that I started fly fishing around the first of January, and you can understand why it took me about a month to catch my first spring creek brown. Man, I froze so many days trying to get a fish. Once you get the first one, it's a snowball effect from there on out. I feel like you could blindfold me and I would still do well on spring.
