Thanks everyone for all the tips and comments. I did some recon last weekend in that area and tentatively picked a couple somewhat-accessible spots.

I haven't fished for wild trout in a long time so if things don't go well, I can always hit the special regs stretch of Bowmans down near SR 29.

I am familiar with the rattlers. Hope I don't see any this weekend up close, at least without a waist-high fence between us! I go to the roundup every June and always have a fun time. Kids like the snakes and I like the beer and steamed clams.

With the expected warmer temps this weekend, Afishinado, I agree with you that the roads will get pretty messy. I will stay away from the old railroad grade towards Mt Springs and stick to the maintained gravel roads.

I will make sure to avoid the private lands. I'm not one for trespassing and remember how I felt when I owned land in the country and saw people walking around. That would be nice if anyone here does own private land up there and doesn't mind allowing fishermen.

Thanks again and beep the horn if you drive by that area this weekend and see a couple guys hitting the creeks.

PS If anyone wants the Google Earth files I made of the wild trout streams, game lands, state parks, state forests, etc. let me know and I can email them to you.
