What type of fishing will the rod be used for and what types of water? A 6 weight is heavier than people typically use for small dries, unless you're going to be fishing bigger rivers with bruiser trout. A 4 or 5 weight would be more common for smaller dries and the size streams we have here in PA. I could be wrong, but that's my take.

As for the Access vs Clearwater questions I can't be much help there. I hear really good things about the cheaper Clearwater though.
