Course when alive and slimy when it dies. The Gunpowder has a bloom most Winters and then when the water warms a little it dies and sloughs off in a gray to white color and a slimy consistency that sticks to everything, hence the snot. This year we had a lot of water coming over the spillway so I am hoping that it is not as bad this year. It is a pain early season when it dies and rolls down the river sticking to everything and anything.
