Don't miss the International Game Fish Assoc Museum. It's right nearby in Dania Beach and worth a visit.

As for fishing, you can't go wrong just walking the beach and blind casting - never know what you'll hook. I'd get out in the am before the crowds. Snook are possible. Redfish and pompano should be around as well as some ladyfish, trout, and jacks. If you see jacks and that are medium size or bigger (about 24"+), don't cast to 'em unless you've got at least a 100yds of backing as they can really smoke a foot bound angler. Big ones are almost impossible to land without a 10WT. I usually leave 'em alone when I'm fishing a 7 or 8WT. Nevertheless they're tempting to cast to and can give a great run for a few seconds (can always break 'em off). I'm not sure about tarpon on the beach in April but in south FL there's usually some tarpon somewhere nearby. There's a shrimp run in that area in spring, so some shrimp flies, like a Borski Slider, would be good to have in addition to the usual Clousers. Small tarpon and peacocks can be found in the many canals. You can purchase a FL license by phone via an 800#.
