afish- Thanks. I am a rank amateur with the writing stuff but I enjoy doing it from time to time. Think I have been fly fishing for maybe 5 years all told and have experienced relatively few days where everything comes together.

Experienced a fantastic sulphur hatch last year followed by and even better spinnerfall. Again, having not been around that long at this craft I had high hopes this year for a repeat performance. Never happened- that's with even chasing it for many days and nights. Hit some of the hatch but nothing like what I had experienced previous.

Feel like I do learn things each time out even if I never get a hookup. Early this spring I had a monster brown on and lost him after about 2 minutes. Had to sit on the bank for about 20 minutes and figure out what just happened. People were probably wondering what this idiot was doing sitting there muttering himself.

I love this sport!
