

---

Subject: : Stream Reports

Topic: : Clarks Creek, Special Regs, Dauphin County, March 11, 2013

Re: Clarks Creek, Special Regs, Dauphin County, March 11, 2013

Author: : wbranch

Date: : 2013/3/11 23:49:03

URL:

I used to do well on the FFO section back around 1988 - 1995 almost any time but especially when the green inch worms were hanging off of the trees. But I agree with both gentlemen above in that there are many sections, that when low, are virtually just too shallow to hold any self respecting trout.

It seems like a perfect place for cheaters who might like to dangle a garden hackle off the end of #12 PT. I've seen bait containers here and there and often, especially during the week, there is no one fishing there.

One time though I was fishing one section about 3/4 of a mile below where there is a parking lot on the right side, going north, set down in a hollow. Well I was very intent and fooling around with something in my vest when out of nowhere I see a CO approaching me. He says "How you doing" and he was eyeballing what I had in my hand and looking at my vest. He said he'd been watching me for ten minutes with binoculars back in the bushes.

I should note though that was on an Opening Day and that is likley why he was there because it the couple of dozen other times I've been there I've never seen another CO.