

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Bonehead move of the decade

Re: Bonehead move of the decade

Author: : salmonoid

Date: : 2013/3/12 17:15:54

URL:

Quote:

outsider wrote:

Krazy Glue to the rescue. The cut was about 1/4" long down to the core of the line. But the cut piece was still attached to the line. So I carefully applied a very tiny amount of Krazy Glue, let it set for half a minute, then quickly squeezed the cut piece back into place. Playing with fire, because I could have glued my fingers to the line. Squeeze for a fraction of a second, then retract my fingers. Kids, don't try this at home. Below the cut was a rough area on one side of the line, so I applied a little Krazy Glue there. And yes Cathy, the leader tip was the hidden culprit.

Fished it today and it worked! No hinge point. Hopefully I can get another decade out of this line. The frugal fisherman personified.

I admire your ingenuity and frugality but is it worth taking the risk of losing a prize fish due to catastrophic Krazy Glue repair failure, versus the cost of buying a new fly line??