

Subject: : Fly Tying

Topic: : Blood dot scrambled egg

Re: Blood dot scrambled egg

Author: : Maurice

Date: : 2013/3/12 22:32:26

URL:

Blood dots are glo bugs with a red(contrasting) yoke. Usually blood dots are tied really small like the size of a real steelhead egg. #16-#20. But I have heard people call all glow bugs with a dot a blood dot.

Scrambled eggs are sucker spawn tied with glo bug yarn. Well actually glo bug yarn tied scrambled egg style.

I tie scrambled egg patterns with a red vein running down the middle.

You just tie in the yarn at the bend and Bunch up a row, cinch it down, bunch up a row, cinch it down, bunch up a row, cinch it down.

For the vein you tie that in to the first cinch and upon each subsequent cinch pull the vein up and cinch it too. It splits the bumps into two rows.

We used to call the scrambled eggs patterns michellin man after the tire company mascot.