

Subject: : Conservation

Topic: : Fishing Creek at Tylersville Hatchery

Re: Fishing Creek at Tylersville Hatchery

Author: : greenghost

Date: : 2013/3/13 9:06:17

URL:

I used to fish this water often in college. And used to go 3 or 4 times every year until a few years ago. I remember from way back when, it was an incredible fishery. A limestone stream that looked like a classic mountain freestoner cutting through a mountain filled with beautiful wild trout, some of size way out of proportion to the size of the creek. And hatches that at times looked like snow. The last couple times I went, it kind of broke my heart. The scenery was still gorgeous, but the fish and quality of fishing, well, it was just a mere shadow of its past.

If there is ANY way we -- as concerned anglers -- could help resurrect this stream to its former glory it would be worth the effort. Perhaps it's time we all crank it up to the next level. I'm going to begin a letter-writing campaign to PFBC and politicians and see if anything comes of it. Hell, it's a start anyway.