

Subject: : Fly Fishing Locations

Topic: : Question on the Yellow Breeches

Question on the Yellow Breeches

Author: : PAFLYBOY

Date: : 2013/3/13 15:25:43

URL:

Hello all, my son and I are going to be in the area for a hockey tournament this weekend and we were looking to do some fishing. It has been many years since I fished that area and I'm not sure of the changes to the streams over the last 15 years. My question is, is the depth/flow(as well as the potential crowds) on the YB from the confluence with the "run" down to a little way below the Allenberry dam sufficient to swing streamers and soft hackle wets on a light two-hander? I recently had shoulder surgery and swinging flies on the two-hander is my preferred method to fish right now(easier on the shoulder, minimal mending and high sticking).

Also, my son has decent abilities with his single hand rod. Any other suggestions as to where I might take him to get in to some fish? I was thinking Big Spring? We plan to fish later Friday and some on Saturday. Thanks in advance, Tight Lines all.