

Subject: : Fly Tying

Topic: : Go to/attractor nymphs

Re: Go to/attractor nymphs

Author: : troutbert

Date: : 2013/3/13 19:59:08

URL:

Quote:

mario66pens wrote:

Walts Worm makes a good sow bug imitation for spring creeks

That's true, in the smaller sizes.

In the larger sizes they look like crane fly larvae, and that is what Walt Young, the originator had in mind.

But they also look like mayfly nymphs, caddis larvae, and baby crayfish, that someone STEPPED ON.

Tie some with a bead (brass, copper, or gold. not silver). The beadhead version is a terrific fly when the water is up and off color.