I rarely fish traditional wets. Probably to my detriment, I know it's an effective method, just never got into it. The rig I described is typically used for high stick nymphing the deep, fast areas.

For a dry dropper, I keep the tippet short and just tie on a dry like normal. Then from there I attach another line to the EYE of that hook, and the dropper goes on that. I just think tying to the eye effects flotation a little less, and is a touch easier to tie on.
