I don't think so. I don't know of ANY animals with bio-luminescent eyes. Not saying they don't exist, I'm sure there's some deep sea creature or something.

Many animals with excellent night vision have highly reflective eyes when you shine a light on em. They have some layer which selectively screens incoming wavelengths. They see only the wavelengths which pass, you see the reflected ones. It makes day vision poorer, and night vision better.

But it's reflected light, not mkaing it's own.
