Thanks for the input

I too have always thought they were an extra problem. I always make an effort to bring the fish to hand as fast as possible, wet my hand before handling and try to keep the fish in the water.

As mentioned removing medium size flies is easy this way but find myself handling the fish more for small flies. I will try a net on streams with potential for larger fish. I can pick up a Frabill net with clear rubber bag for about $25 at the local sporting good store - will give it a try - if it works, great. If not I'll pass it along or donate to the local kids fishing group.

BTW for those that carry the net on their back - does your back get wet from the wet net after use?

Thanks much
