

Subject: : Fly Tying

Topic: : stonefly dry

Re: stonefly dry

Author: : dryflyguy

Date: : 2013/3/16 8:50:28

URL:

I use a fluttering caddis pattern tied in all gray. Works quite well.

The early stoneflies are certainly not a hatch that I would plan a fishing trip around. But there are times when the fish do take them on the surface.

Usually when I'm out fishing BWO's in late feb and march. And I'll notice the fish suddenly start making splashy rises - instead of the usual dainty sips they make to the BWO's.

Many times I've had just 1 or 2 fish decide to start eating stoneflys - and I had to switch over to catch them.

While all of the other fish in the pool stayed on the BWO's