
Subject: : Stream Reports

Topic: : Clarks Creek, Special Regs, Dauphin County, March 11, 2013

Re: Clarks Creek, Special Regs, Dauphin County, March 11, 2013

Author: : Letort

Date: : 2013/3/16 19:46:53

URL:

"Took my nephew there on the 9th. We walked about a 1/4 mile section in the middle of the ffo section. We saw 2 fish. That's it. Neither fish let us even get a cast off. I was even wearing camouflage jacket. The amount of downed trees in that section was staggering. The ffo has a ton of sh*t water. I live 5 minutes or less from Clark's. I might fish it twice a year just because I have cabin fever. I might take some flack for this....but....its a pretty stream but not much of a fishery. Hatches aren't very impressive either. Guess you could say that I don't really care if I ever fish it again but to each his own and there are plenty of guys that absolutely love that stream."

I have to wonder if a tornado touched down, because the number of trees in that one area, from both sides of the bank, was as you say, staggering.

During high water, I would think that it will act as a levy to some degree, because of the number of trees. They may be enough to back up the water upstream appreciably.