

Subject: : Beginner Forum

Topic: : Getting dialed in with blood knots

Re: Getting dialed in with blood knots

Author: : dc410

Date: : 2013/3/17 9:14:21

URL:

A double or triple surgeon knot is a great replacement for a blood knot and is generally much easier to tie while on the stream, particularly during fading light conditions. However, both the blood knot and the surgeon knot require attention when tightening up the knot to make sure that it all comes together properly. A little bit of saliva on the knot will help lubricate it and keep the mono from heating up when you cinch it tight.