

Subject: : Fly Tying

Topic: : Go to/attractor nymphs

Re: Go to/attractor nymphs

Author: : RLeeP

Date: : 2013/3/19 17:23:08

URL:

Did anybody suggest the Whitlock Fox. Sq, nymph?

If not, I will.

Like the hare's ear and the simple muskrat glob nymph and several other fur-based nymphs, the Whitlock nymph is one of those flies that the rattier it looks, the better it works. That's a big plus in my view, because it means I can tie them somewhat sloppily and make believe that I intended to do so...

It's good with or without a bead (but not silver, which is useless) and with or without a wing case. Sizes 6-18.

I don't do photos online, but here is a pattern: [http://www.flymartonline.com/modules...
article&name=News&sid=295](http://www.flymartonline.com/modules...article&name=News&sid=295)

I always carry at least 50 of them..