Do you mean are we going up or are there any hatches at that time? I will attempt to go every other weekend until the water warms / releases drop. I have another 1-3 guys that will attempt to make up in June.

As long as there is a decent release, it's good through most of the summer. The fishing gets tougher and the bugs get smaller. If the spring continues as it has been, you might have drakes that late in the year. Late June will offer fishing to a hatch in the morning / early afternoon and again in the evening. You can always nymph or streamer fish.
