

Subject: : Fly Tying

Topic: : is this normal...

Re: is this normal...

Author: : The_Sasquatch

Date: : 2013/3/21 9:16:37

URL:

Quote:

nfrechet wrote:

Just wondering if anyone else has accumulated this many experimental / non-fished / fishable but to embarrassed to put in a fly box flies put them in a fly box and fish them. youd be suprised what fish will take!

This is true! 2 weeks ago I was fishing a small stream and I wasn't taking anything. I came across a BIG HE that I tied when i first started. It was terrible. Too heavy, bead was too big (I actually had to wrap copper wire in front of the bead to keep it from sliding over the eye of the hook), everything was out of whack. I thought, "what the heck?", tied it on, and I started nailing the brookies. Actually, when the fly was wet, it looked pretty awesome and the trout loved it! I couldn't tie it again to save my life, but I hope I never lose this fly.