So far, no one is being entertained but the posters of this "humor." Consider that before posting again.

My thoughts exactly. If Mike thinks he has a good idea, who is anyone to say otherwise? I think my advice was solid. Get it made, get it known, and get it to the masses. Competition will be thick once the big companies see his product is selling. They will look at the patent, figure a way around it (it's sure to happen), and since they already have a known "brand", it will be almost impossible to compete. I have a feeling the same people that are mocking him are the very same kind of people that will buy his finished product, or a knockoff of the same product. Just an feeling..
